The Journal of Rheumatology: A Strong Supporter of Pediatric Rheumatology

To the Editor:

I am very much enjoying your trip down memory lane looking back at important articles in The Journal of Rheumatology. I was especially interested in your “Looking Back at the 1990s.” I would like to point out an important milestone in The Journal that also took place in the 1990s, that is, the establishment of Pediatric Rheumatology as a section in The Journal. This was pre-saged by a supplement, entitled “Perspectives in Pediatric Rheumatology,” that was published for 3 years, from 1990 to 1993. The 13 perspective articles took thematic approaches to various topics and also included abstracts from several pediatric meetings. Although the Perspectives lasted only a short period, it led to the development of a section on Pediatric Rheumatology in The Journal and, subsequently, a pediatric rheumatologist assuming the role of the editor of the journal itself.

The Editor and Managing Editor in those days, Duncan Gordon and Sonya Gruson, respectively, were visionary in recognizing the importance of such a section, and The Journal deserves a lot of credit for its leadership in the dissemination of scholarly work related to pediatric rheumatology.

Ronald M. Laxer¹, MDCM
¹Professor of Pediatrics and Medicine, University of Toronto, and The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, Ontario, Canada. The author declares no conflicts of interest relevant to this article.
Address correspondence to Dr. Ronald M. Laxer, The Hospital for Sick Children, 555 University Avenue, Toronto, ON M5G 1X8, Canada. Email: Ronald.laxer@sickkids.ca.